Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

A few years ago, while I was on holiday in Sinai near Saint Catherine, I stopped for the night in a small desert village. It was a poor place, and there was no real hotel, but the owner of a local restaurant, Mr. Hassan, kindly offered me a bed for the night. "Please wait here," he said, pointing to a wooden table outside. "I'll prepare your room."

The evening was beautiful. The sun was setting behind the rugged mountains, and the stars were just beginning to appear. Families were lighting small fires to cook their evening meals, and the pleasant smell of wood smoke filled the cool desert air.

Then I realized I was no longer alone. An old man with a long white beard had quietly sat at the table beside me. His clothes were dusty and almost in rags.

"How can I help you?" I asked.

"Let me tell your fortune, sir," he said.

I laughed. "I don't believe in that kind of thing." But he gently held my hand and refused to let go. "Very well," I said. "First, tell me about my past. If you can do that, I'll let you talk about the future."

He read my palm lines in silence and then began to describe my childhood in Alexandria, my family, and even places where I had lived and worked in other cities.

Every word was true!

"Stop!" I cried. "How do you know all this?"
